PITTSBURGH, July 15.—Chairman Oates announced in the opening of the investigation Thursday morning that the committee so far had searched only for facts, and was not ready to make a report. He declared it likely there would be no minority report.

General Superintendent Potter was the first witness. He described the details of steel-making and the work performed by the different classes of workmen. He said that the Homestead mills were the finest in the world, and were men made 50 per cent. better wages than in any other plant. He said on the basis of reduction proposed by the company, which precipitated the strike, was 18 per cent. About 300 men were affected. This reduction made the Homestead millmen were getting more wages than in any other mill and the introduction of improved machinery increasing the output of the plant.

The first disturbance that occurred was before the mill shut down when he and Mr. Frick were being in fight. When the strike broke out, the company tried to tear them down but was drenched with water from a hose. The morning of July 1 some of the foremen and men were stopped by others who tried to keep them out of the mill. On July 3 the left mill and returned on the boats Little and Little. On July 6, when the strike broke out, the company tried to tear them down but was drenched with water from a hose. ATTORNEYS for Sophia Lyons, the noted pennyweight and bank thief, in jail at Mt. Sterling for conspiracy in the attempted robbery of the Traders' Depot Bank some time ago, made up a bill for the cost of the other day for a reduction of bail, but the request was refused. Sophia will linger behind the bars.

MORE STRIKES.

Thirty-Two Hundred Carnegie Mill Men Go Out

To Join the Ranks of the 80,000 Other Men in Pittsburgh.

In a few days this Army of Idle Men will be increased fifteen hundred.

They then go on strike in sympathy with Homestead strikers.

PITTSBURGH, July 15.—Thirty-two hundred iron and steel workers Thursday evening joined the ranks of the sixty thousand other men in the streets of Pittsburgh. Monday this army of idle men will be increased sixteen hundred, because that number of men in the Carnegie mills at Beaver Falls, a small town near by Pittsburgh, are going to quit work. These forty-eight hundred men go on a strike, not because they have any grievance on the score of wages, but because they sympathize with the Homestead mill workers, and fancy that by closing up the two Carnegie mills in Allegheny county, the iron in Beaver Falls will break the iron will of H. C. Frick and force him to negotiate with the men at Homestead. He will never do so, as he has no intention of doing so. At a meeting Thursday evening about two thousand men left the Thirty-third street mills with the determination to do as their committee said they would, when they informed H. C. Frick, through Manager Dillon that the scale must be signed at Homestead within three days, or the sympathy with the Homestead men. They received no allowance from the Amalgamated association treasury, and willingly make the sacrifice and endure the hardships for the men at Homestead, whom they have seen in the streets of Pittsburgh at the recent mass meetings upon this action was declared unanimous in favor of. There is little disagreement. Some of the prominent workers are opposed to it, and think the men are overreaching themselves.

This move on the part of these men is an independent one, not under orders from the Amalgamated association, though said to be tacitly sanctioned by it, and is a result of the concerted action of a body of mill workers fully in sympathy with the Homestead men. They received no allowance from the Amalgamated association treasury, and willingly make the sacrifice and endure the hardships for the men at Homestead, whom they have seen in the streets of Pittsburgh at the recent mass meetings upon this action was declared unanimous in favor of. There is little disagreement. Some of the prominent workers are opposed to it, and think the men are overreaching themselves.

His wife is at the hospital, fatally wounded, with two bullet wounds in her forehead. Wednesday night Quincy's neighbors were alarmed by hearing several shots in his house. Breaking open the door, they ran to the chamber where the shots were heard. Mr. Quincy was lying on the window, with his head on an unconscious. A trail of blood showed where he had walked around the house. Quincy was lying on the bed. A chamber door key, with traces of blood on it and powder papers labeled "sulphur" were found on a table. A revolver was found on the lawn under the window Quincy's wound was slight but the poison had its effect. He was a victim of the choral habit and for three months had been drinking. The theory is that he did the shooting, but the position of the door key and the revolver is against it.

ROCK, July 15.—The eruption of Mt. Acton is rapidly increasing. Involutions, immense streams of lava are pouring down the mountain side, and it appears certain that several villages and number of dwellings will be destroyed. All the craters are active. Another is throwing the appearance of a river of fire, and is very beautiful to look at, though it is bound to rain much property. Another of the craters is throwing a little of red rocks to an immense height, while the edges of the third crater threaten to crumble.
